"Instead of trying to be responsible for all the problems in the world, we should take on what we love and care about...This will help us develop great faith that others are taking care of their piece. People who don't know the details about climate change may care deeply about the forests, the animals, and the children. It is very important that we share, not only our merit, but also the responsibilities. Somehow we have to relieve ourselves of the enormity, which is so debilitating." ~ Paul Hawken
