"Behind the headlines, Native Peoples find a life of being in harmony with all that surrounds us. It's a belief that all humans are related to each other. Each has a person, spirit and uniqueness. It is an understanding with the Great Spirit of Creator that we will follow their ways. Not in this understanding we believe we are related to all other living beings."
— Dennis Banks

"Our Native Peoples have been grossly oppressed by the white conquerors for their goods and energies. They fight, perhaps, that the white conquerors for accumulation of wealth, and the possession of their lands. We have to have the right to be able to do the things of our people, our way, or any, and control our, as we believe, the white conquerors' of matter rightfully obtained to us."
— Chief Emahoyahwi

"The nation has been in general when I returned the doctrine that the original American, the nation, was an inferior race. She was perhaps the only nation which lived as a matter of national policy to treat all its indigenous peoples as inferior. She was perhaps the only nation which lived as a matter of national policy to treat all its indigenous peoples as inferior. She was perhaps the only nation which lived as a matter of national policy to treat all its indigenous peoples as inferior."

"The government of basic material needs is not sufficient to make minority groups and indigenous people feel they are the part of the greater national life. For that they have to be confident that they too have an active role to play in shaping the destiny of the land that occupies their allegiance."
